Racing Into the Future:

How Technology is Transforming Horse Racing

The future of horse racing is tied to technological advancements that can transform how the sport is experienced by fans and betters.

Horse racing, a sport steeped in tradition, is undergoing significant transformation driven by advancements in technology. The integration of data analytic, real-time tracking systems, and innovative training equipment is revolutionizing and how race outcomes are determined.

Revolutionizing Race Analysis Through Data Analytics

Data analytics has emerged as a game-changer in Horse racing, offering unprecedented insights into race performance, betting trends, and outcomes. One of the most significant advancements in horse racing technology is the availability of real-time data. Sensors and GPS tracking devices are now commonly used during races to monitor a horses's speed, heart rate, and stride length.

This real-time data allows trainers and jockeys to make on-the-fly decisions during a race, optimizing performance and increasing the chances of winning. Moreover, this data is invaluable for betters, who can now access detailed statistics to inform their wagers, leading to more strategic and potentially profitable betting decisions.

These models help trainers optimize training regimens and allow betters to identify potential winners more effectively. The use of machine learning algorithms in these predictive models has further enhanced their accuracy, making data analytics an indispensable tool in modern horse racing.

Advanced Training Equipment for Optimal Horse Performance

The advent of new training equipment is revolutionizing how horses are prepared for races. Training horses has become more sophisticated with the introduction of equine treadmills and hydrotherapy pools. These tools allow for controlled exercise environments where horses can build endurance and strength without risks associated with traditional track training.

Hydrotherapy pools, in particular, are beneficial for injury recovery, offering a low-impact way for horses to maintain fitness while healing from injuries. The use of these technologies has led to a significant reduction in injury rates and improved overall horse health, contributing to longer and more successful racing careers.

Wearable technology, including heart rate monitors and motion sensors, is now commonly used during training sessions. These provide real-time feedback on a horse's physiological state, enabling trainers to adjust training intensity and avoid overexertion.

The data collected from these devices is also used to tailor training programs to each horse's specific needs, optimizing performance and reducing the risk of injury. As a result, horses are better prepared for races, leading to more competitive performances and a higher likelihood of success.

Shaping the Future of Horse Racing

As technology continues to evolve, its influence on horse racing is expected to grow. Artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning are poised to play a significant role in the future of horse racing. AI algorithms are already being used to analyze vast amounts of race data, identify patterns, and predict outcomes with remarkable accuracy.

In future, AI could be used to optimize race strategies, enhance training programs, and even assist in horse selection and breeding decisions. The potential applications of AI in horse racing are vast, and as the technology continues to advance, its impact on the sport is likely to be profound.

Technology is not only transforming how races are run but also how they are experienced by fans. High-definition video coverage, live streaming, and interactive betting platforms are making horse racing more accessible to a global audience.

Fans can watch races from anywhere in the world, place bets in real-time, and access detailed race analysis, all from their device. These innovations are helping to attract a new generation of fans to the sport, ensuring its continued relevance in the digital age.

Racing Towards a Technological Future

The integration of technology in horse racing is revolutionizing every aspect of the sport, from race analysis and training to race outcomes and spectator engagements. As data analytics, advanced training equipment, and AI continue to evolve, horse racing is becoming more competitive, efficient, and accessible to a global audience.

The future of horse racing is undeniably tied to these technological advancements, which are not only enhancing the performance and safety of the horses, but also transforming how the sport is experienced by fans and bettors. With continued innovation, horse racing is set to remain a dynamic and exciting sport well into the future.

Fall Yearling & Mixed Sale

Horse racing has no shortage of dynasties. From the glory years of Turf Paradise to multi-generational families of trainers and other horsemen, the sport's history can be told through the continuity of certain names in the lists of winners of our great races.

Although ancestry and confirmation go together, the correlation is complicated. What are the factors buyers consider when assessing a potential racehorse. In part, it depends on their intentions. Different choices may be made if the horse or offspring is intended for their own use or how the horse or offsprings might sell. The ATBA had a great selection to choice from.

The yearlings that brought the bucks graded high on everyone's list. With 120 yearlings and 16 broodmares shoppers choose wisely.

With the sound of the auctioneers dropping of the gavel once again on October 24, 2024 yearlings started making their way to the sale ring in hopes to be the sale topper. He came from the consignment of Fleming Thoroughbred Farm, LLC., G. Chris Coleman purchased this outstanding yearling for $39,000, #22 a bay colt sired by Lotsa Mischief out of Peppy Miller and another Filly #72 for $19,000.00, sired by Flameaway out of Dawdle. Rockingham Ranch and Bryon Seymore purchased a hand full of racing prospects. A big thank you for every ones support that attended the ATBA sale.

All involved in this endeavor; sellers and workers should be commended. Space won't allow me to acknowledge everyone...so. Thanks to all who helped make this the "Best Little Sale in the West."

The ATBA Board of Directors, and staff would like to wish all our buyers the best of racing luck with their new prospect's and we hope to see you in the winner's circle in the new year!

Good Luck!

Horseracing Wins As Treasury/IRS Issue an Update on Tax Rules

The Internal Revenue Service (“IRS”) often disallows deductions of expenses from horse activities because the taxpayer derives personal pleasure from the activity. The IRS carefully scrutinizes activities engaged in for personal pleasure because the activity may be a hobby and not a business. The IRS should permit taxpayers to deduct their expenses from horse activities even if the taxpayers derive personal pleasure from their horse operation. The IRS’ logic does not withstand even ordinary scrutiny. The fact that a taxpayer derives pleasure from an activity (making money, which is clearly taxable, can also be quite pleasant) does not make it a hobby. The IRS’ weapon of choice to attack horse owners is Internal Revenue Code (“IRC”) § 183. This is the so called “Hobby Loss” statute. IRC § 183 prevents a taxpayer from deducting expenses related to his/her horse operation unless the horse owner can prove that he/she has an “actual and honest objective of making a profit.”

The IRS regularly audits taxpayers who are using deductions from horse activities to shelter income from other sources. IRC § 183 applies to individuals and to entities such as S-corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies and trusts that permit the flow through of deductions to an individual horse owner’s tax return. The IRS frequently disallows deductions using IRC § 183. If the IRS can demonstrate that the expenses are related to “personal activities/hobbies” then the IRS can disallow all deductions claimed that are related to the horse operation.

Because the general statute of limitations for an IRS audit is three years, the IRS will generally attempt to disallow deductions for at least a three year period of time. The impact of an IRS attack can be financially devastating to a taxpayer who is forced to pay three years of back taxes. Taxpayers must often pay penalties and interest that can substantially increase the taxpayer’s total liability to the IRS.

Segregating Activities Can Defeat An IRS Audit

Horse owners may be engaged in several different horse activities. For example, a taxpayer may be engaged in breeding, boarding, training, and racing or showing horses. Some of the activities may be profit seeking while others may be for personal pleasure. Some of the activities may be profitable, and others may be generating losses. Separating the activities may reduce the likelihood of an IRS audit. There is a saying in Kentucky that “pigs get fat and hogs get slaughtered.” This phrase is an appropriate analogy for the hobby loss area. Many horse owners attempt to deduct all expenses related to the entire horse operation. This all or nothing approach increases the likelihood that the IRS will attempt to disallow all of their deductions relating to their horse operation.

Informed taxpayers however, often segregate their horse operations into “separate activities” to insulate a substantial portion of their deductions from IRS attack. The IRS may examine each different activity separately to determine if each activity is being conducted “for profit.” The IRS recognizes that a taxpayer may be engaged in several different activities, some of which may be profit-seeking while others are not. The IRS will generally accept the taxpayer’s characterization of his activities, unless it is artificial and cannot be reasonably supported under the facts and circumstances of the case. If a horse owner engages in two or more “separate activities,” deductions and income from each separate activity are not aggregated either in determining whether a particular activity is engaged in for profit or in applying the Hobby Loss rules.

For example, if a taxpayer has a breeding/showing operation which is combined for tax purposes, the showing part of the business may incur substantial losses in an effort to promote the stallion which is the lynchpin of the breeding operation. The breeding operation, standing alone may generate a small profit, without the show expenses. With the show expenses factored in, the business generates losses and the prospect of a hobby loss audit increases. By separating the two activities, the inevitable losses in the show operation do not taint the breeding business. As a result, the profit made, even if small, can create the presumption against hobby loss characterization by the IRS.

In this example, the taxpayer’s horse showing activity may be “for profit” because it promotes the breeding operation. However, the taxpayer may receive tremendous personal pleasure from showing his horses. This affection for showing horses should not prevent the taxpayer from deducting losses generated from his horse show activities. Is it not true that most psychologists and sociologists counsel that people choosing careers they enjoy are much more likely to succeed and enjoy good mental health than those stuck in positions that are tolerated for the money earned alone?

This separate activity analysis can be a valuable tool to the informed horse owner.

For example, horse owners conducting horse operations at different geographic locations may choose to separate the two activities. On the other hand, it may be in the horse owners best interest to have both activities considered together for Hobby Loss purposes. Obviously, the best approach depends upon the amount of profit and the amount of deductions that are being generated by each of the separate horse activities.

Another example of how aggregating activities together can benefit a taxpayer involves the land on which the horse operation is conducted. Land that is used for horse operations may be extremely valuable and may have a high appreciation rate. Informed taxpayers can use the appreciation from their land investment to demonstrate to the IRS that their horse activities are being conducted for profit. Again, it may give a person great pleasure to make physical and visual improvements to a property to enhance its value, but it would be difficult for the IRS to single out the pleasure component of this activity to attempt to label it a hobby. To take advantage of the land appreciation component of the activity, however, horse owners must carefully link their horse operation to the land in some meaningful way. For example, building barns and improving the land to make it more suitable for a particular horse operation demonstrates an economic and organizational interrelationship between the land investment and the horse operation. To summarize, proper planning permits a taxpayer to use the appreciation from his land to reduce the losses that this horse operation is generating.

Presumption of Profit Intent

Segregating profitable activities from unprofitable activities permits taxpayers to take advantage of a presumption of profit intent. IRC § 183 creates a rebuttal presumption that a horse operation is engaged in for profit if the gross income derived from the horse operation exceeds the deductions in two out of seven years. In other words, if an activity generates a profit (and we hope the taxpayer enjoys making the profit, and so should the IRS) in two out of seven years, it is very unlikely that the IRS will attempt to disallow any deductions claimed with respect to that activity. It is important to keep in mind, however, that the presumption does not work in reverse. In other words, if a horse owner does not make a profit in two of the seven years, there is no inference that the activity is not engaged in for profit. In short, the presumption can only help horse owners. It cannot be used as a sword against them.

Identifying Objective Factors That Protect Horse Operations From An Internal Revenue Service Audit

The IRS and the courts attempt to determine whether a taxpayer engaged in a horse operation has an actual and honest profit objective to determine whether the Hobby Loss statute disallows deductions related to the activity.

However, determining what a taxpayer is thinking when they begin their horse operation is a difficult task. As a result, the IRS is very skeptical of statements by the taxpayer or his advisors claiming to support the taxpayers argument that his horse operation is for profit. Instead, the IRS uses objective factors to analyze the facts and circumstances surrounding the horse operation to determine if the taxpayer honestly and actually intended to make a profit with his horse operation.

The IRS generally uses nine factors to determine whether a taxpayer conducted a horse activity for profit or as a hobby. However, the nine factors are not exclusive and the IRS will consider any factor relevant to this inquiry.

In addition to the nine objective factors the IRS also uses a common sense approach to determine if the horse owner actually intends to make a profit from his horse operation. The IRS generally asks the following questions when they are auditing a horse operation under the Hobby Loss statute. The five questions are as follows:

1. How much income is the taxpayer earning from sources other than his horse operation?
2. Are the deductions from the horse operation sheltering a substantial portion of the income that the taxpayer is earning from other sources?
3. What is the total amount of the cumulative deductions that the taxpayer has claimed since the horse operation began?
4. In the real world (as opposed to the horse owners projections) can the horse operation make a profit giving the taxpayer the benefit of the doubt on most issues?
5. If the horse operation can make a profit, how likely is it under the specific facts and circumstances of the particular case, that it will make a profit?

To summarize, the IRS generally reviews these financial questions to determine if the horse operation makes economic sense to a prudent investor.

The IRS uses the following objective nine factor tests to determine if a horse operation is conducted for profit or as a hobby.

1 Manner In Which The Taxpayer Carries On The Activity

This factor analyzes whether the horse operation is conducted in a businesslike manner. For example, the taxpayer should perform the following tasks in a businesslike manner:

- a. Maintain accurate books and records.
- b. Change unprofitable operating methods in an attempt to improve profitability.
- c. Model their horse operation after successful, profitable horse operations.

- d. Consult with experts in the field concerning their horse operations
- e. Maintain separate checking accounts segregating their horse activity from their personal checking accounts.
- f. Prepare a written business plan with financial projections.

2. The Expertise Of The Taxpayer Or His Advisors.

Under this factor, a horse owner should conduct extensive study of the accepted business practices in his particular horse activity. In other words, taxpayers who have limited experience in the horse industry, must either self educate themselves or consult with experts who have expertise in conducting profitable horse operations.

3. Time And Effort Expended By The Taxpayer In Carrying On The Activity.

Obviously, a taxpayer who devotes much of his personal time and effort to carrying on his horse activity is indicating an intent to derive a profit.

The key to this factor, is to carefully document the amount of time and effort spent by the taxpayer in conducting his horse operation. For example, if the only effort being expended by the horse owner is to ride their horses in competition, this rarely demonstrates profit motive. In fact, devoting substantial time and effort to the recreational aspects of the horse operation may demonstrate to the IRS that the activity is not conducted for profit.

4. Expectation That Assets Used In The Activity May Appreciate In Value.

The term “profit” in determining whether a horse activity is conducted for profit may include appreciation in the value of assets. Obviously, the horse owner should monitor the appreciation of his horses, his land and any other assets directly related to his horse operation. These appreciation amounts should also be quantified periodically by qualified appraisers.

5. The Success Of The Taxpayer In Carrying On Other Similar Or Dis-Similar Activities.

Obviously, a taxpayer who has successfully engaged in similar horse activities in the past has demonstrated his ability to make a profit with a specific type of horse venture. On the other hand, a taxpayer who has lost money in prior horse operations must overcome his prior unprofitable activities to demonstrate that his current activity is being conducted for profit.

6. The Taxpayers History Of Income Or Losses With Respect To The Activity.

The IRS typically quantifies the cumulative income and losses for a particular horse activity from its beginning date. Taxpayers using losses from a horse operation to reduce their income from other sources have an increased risk of an IRS audit.

7. The Amount Of Occasional Profits, If Any, Which Are Earned.

The IRS is likely to audit a taxpayer who invests a substantial amount of money in a horse operation that continues to incur substantial losses. On the other hand, taxpayers generating substantial profits even for a few years demonstrate (through the presumption of profitable intent) that their horse activity is being conducted for profit.

8. The Financial Status Of The Taxpayer.

Taxpayers who have substantial income from sources unrelated to their horse operation are at risk for an IRS audit. Generally, taxpayers who have substantial income from other sources receive particular scrutiny from the IRS. Specifically, the IRS generally attempts to determine whether the continued losses from the horse operation will impact (or reduce) the particular taxpayer’s lifestyle. If the taxpayers lifestyle will be unaffected by the continued losses generated by the horse operation, this may demonstrate to the IRS that the horse operation is not engaged in for profit.

9. Elements Of Personal Pleasure Or Recreation.

The mere fact that a taxpayer derives personal pleasure from engaging in their horse operation activity is not sufficient to cause the activity to be classified as a hobby. If it is a predominant reason for the horse activity or if the personal pleasure clearly outweighs the other factors combined, the taxpayer may be vulnerable to IRS scrutiny. Accordingly, horse owners should do more than merely attend events in which their horse is competing. The competition should be for a clearly defined business purpose (for example to showcase the attributes of a sire standing at the taxpayers farm, or to enhance the value of the horse for resale or to win prize money or earn points toward a championship) consistent with the taxpayers overall profit strategy. Otherwise, it may appear that the horse operation is being conducted as a hobby as opposed to a business.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the best defense for horse owners who may be audited by the IRS is a good offense. Horse owners who make informed business decisions and who document those decisions carefully, can likely avoid or successfully defend an IRS audit. Unfortunately, taxpayers who fail to plan or to become familiar with the Hobby Loss rules are generally vulnerable to an IRS Hobby Loss audit.

EZ IZ ONZAWAY broke slowly, trailed the quick pace around the turn, swung out to the five path in upper stretch and rallied to surge past the embattled leading pair at the sixteenth pole. TIME TO FLY vied for the lead two wide and between horses, sustained the long duel with his inner rival through upper stretch, but got outkicked by an outer bidder at the sixteenth pole and prevailed for place. MANZONI vied for the lead with a pair of outer rivals around the turn, sustained a long battle with a single outer counterpart through the lane, got outkicked by a wider bidder at the sixteenth pole, kept on but missed place. ODE TO MY BRO BOB prompted three deep, vied around the turn but gave way entering the lane. CREE stalked four wide and faded turning for home.

Nancy J Fleming

After 92 years and 179 days on this planet, "Jodie" Fleming passed away peacefully in her sleep Wednesday morning, September 4, 2024.

What a blessing to wake up in Heaven!

Nancy Joan (pronounced "JoAn") Roberds was born at home in west Phoenix to Mary Etoile and Riley Roberds on March 9, 1932. She was the oldest of three sisters; both Evelyn Jean Norlin and Mary Jane Sutter preceded her in death.

During her childhood the family moved several times due to her dad's construction work, including times spent in Oregon. But after marrying Gene Fleming at the age of 18 and one day, Jodie (the nickname he gave her) lived the remainder of her life in Arizona, the majority of that time was on the 115th Ave Fleming Thoroughbred Farm. Only after the farm relocated to Willcox, Az in 2006 did Jodie and Gene move to a home in Pebble Creek. Her husband of 60+ years and the love of her life preceded her in death, February 2011.

Jodie's dream as a young woman was always to be a homemaker, and that she did to the utmost. She was a wife. She was a mother. She was a seamstress, a neat-as-a-pin housekeeper, an expert at laundry, and she excelled at wonderful home cooked meals and desserts, jams, jellies and candy. Ohthere is so much more! How do you fit 92 years in to 2 paragraphs? She was the Matriarch, and she became "Grandma Jodie" and "Aunt Jo" to not only her family, ut to family and friends who needed that special generational person in their lives,

Jodie is survived by her four children, Carolyn Hardison, Marvin (Debbie), Jolene Larson, and Gerald(Teri); 12 grandchildren, who all reside in Arizona and 28 great-grandchildren, with another due in December. She has extended family of many nieces and nephews, and one cousin from her generation.

What an inspiration she was to all she touched. Rest in Peace.

Attention

ARIZONA STALLION OWNERS
Keep your Stallions progeny eligible!

Stallion Owners;

Any stallion that stands the entire breeding season in Arizona, and files a copy of the The Jockey Club Report of Mares bred for that breeding season with the ATBA office, that stallion (s) offspring will be eligible to race in the Stallion Stakes Derby.

What this means to you as a stallion owner.

All 2023 foals of Arizona Stallions (standing the full 2021 breeding season in Arizona) will be eligible to enter the 2025 Stallion Stakes derby.

This should create an exciting race as there are no early nominations, or late fees.

Stallion owners must send a copy of the Jockey Club Report of Mares Bred to the ATBA office each breeding season. This is mandatory if your stallions offspring is to have the opportunity to participate.

Foals need not be Arizona-bred, but must be by a stallion standing the full season in Arizona and a copy of the Report of Mares bred on file with the Arizona Thoroughbred Breeders office.

The Arizona Stallion Stakes Derby is a restricted race for the offspring of Arizona Stallions.

If you have any questions do not hesitate to call the ATBA office,
(602) 942-1310
